BELL ROCK.

A gloom was cast over this community early Monday morning, November 4th, when a telegram received by Mrs. B. F. Revell announced the sudden passing away of her father, Mortimer Meeks, of Parry Sound. Mr. Meeks suffered a severe stroke about ten years ago, and ever since had been in delicate health, and lately had been helping nurse his wife through a long course of typhoid. The strain proved too much for his frail condition and he passed suddenly away on Nov. 3rd. The late Mr. Meeks was born at this place sixty years ago, the son of the late Sycurgus Meeks. He came of United Empire Loyalist stock. He lived here the greater part of his life where he had many warm friends and neighbors who regret his death. The late Mr. Meeks was a very brave man and in his younger days was considered one of the best swimmers in this district, having rescued over a score of people from drowning and risking his own life. He served in the Fenian raids, was a Conservative in politics, an Orangeman and a Free Mason. He attended the Anglican church. Surviving are a widow, six children, and one brother, James Meeks of this place.

COLEBROOK.

Rev. Mr. Wilson, of Wilton circuit, occupied the pulpit in the Methodist church here last Sabbath, Rev. Mr. McMaddin being absent.

Milton Huffman was thrown from his horse, when returning home from the field. He hurt his shoulder which will confine him to the house for several days.

Rufus Wagar who was shingling a barn, slipped and fell from the roof to the ground, about fifteen feet, hurting his face and head.

Mrs. Thos. Townsend, who went to accompany her sister, Elizabeth, home slipped and fell, spraining her wrist.

Mr. McKenzie, the Toronto lawyer who conducted the cases for the defendant in the local option suit held here this summer, spent last Sabbath with his friends here.

Chas. Ward, an elderly man, had one of his ribs fractured by a kick from a horse.

Roy Yowdy was brought home last week very sick. He is now improving.

Harry Woodruff has returned from the North West, where he has been during the summer.

Freeman Lee has arrived here from his home in the North West to visit his grandparents.

DESERONTO ROAD.

Mr. Wm. Cade is again in our midst. At present his machine is at Mr. Robt. Rennie's, having completed Mr. Byron Rose's job.

Mr. Mendle Kimmerly is at present away to his shanty fishing on the Prince Edward shore.

Messrs. Thos. and Billy Madole have completed their job of plowing for the Rathbun Company near the hen houses.

DESERONTO.

Mr. J. J. Johnston has gone to Toronto for the winter.

Miss Lena Finnegan, of Enterprise, was a guest at the McKenny-Dunn wedding.

Mrs. John Dalton and Mrs. C. A. Anderson went to Toronto on Tuesday to make a short visit with respective friends.

Mr. P. A. McKeown was in town last week. He is now located in Grafton. Mrs. McKeown, jr., and Mrs. McKeown, sr., accompanied him to the above-named town.

On Saturday farmers on the market were asking—and were getting it too—$1 per bushel for potatoes, while potatoes could be secured at the stores for 80c. per bushel. Potatoes sold on Friday on the St. Lawrence market in Toronto, at 50c and 60c per bushel. In view of the latter two facts it is difficult to see where our market people find justification in demanding a figure far in advance of what potatoes can be secured in Toronto. And yet people are met with it in the smaller places who hold up their hands in holy horror and exclaim at the tremendous cost of living in the large cities as compared with towns, say, the size of Deseronto. Aside from rent, experience finds it very difficult to see what advantage the smaller has over the larger places. To offset this wages are perhaps double, or nearly so. In conclusion, it would be well for our good housewives to find out what our storekeepers ask for produce before they pay almost any price that is asked on the market.

A new consignment of books fresh from the publishers has just been placed upon the shelves of the Public Library. There is the usual collection of fiction and juvenile books, all of which will in due season find their intended destination without any introduction. The following high class literature may be safely recommended to all members. The reader is respectfully requested to preserve this list and when in need of first class reading matter it will be found among the following:

Versailles and The Trianons by Pierre de Noeliac and The Rhine by H. J. Mackenzie. These two beautiful presentation volumes are works of art and will be found intensely interesting to the traveller and to the reader who cannot afford to travel.

Home Life in Norway by H. K. Daniels. The result of twenty years residence and observation in Norway and reveals to English readers many an unknown phase in the life of the Norseman.

Insects Injurious to Fruits. The fruit grower will find this volume very instructive and of great assistance.

Self-Government in Canada. The story of the beginning and struggles for self-government in our own country, a fascinating historical work.

Africa of To-day by Joseph King Goodrich. A very instructive book showing the progress towards civilization of the dark continent.

The Wilderness of the Pacific Coast Islands by Charles Sheldon. The reader will find in this well written and illustrated volume much interesting information about his own country that he never knew before.

The World's Minerals by L. J. Spencer. The beautiful colored illustrations are worthy of careful study and will give the reader a superficial knowledge of mineralogy that could not be acquired so easily from any source.

A Fly on the Wheel. A story by Lieut.-Col. Thomas H. Lewin of his experiences in India. Throwing a great deal of light upon life in that country fifty years ago.

Tales from Irish History. A neat volume, easily digested and agreeable to the palate.

Winter by Dallas Lore Sharp. The author tries by story and sketch to catch the spirit of the season. A timely little book to read just now.

Giant Little Wales. Sketches of it's people, places and customs by Jeanette Marks.

Persia and It's people. At this crisis in the history of that part of the world this beautiful volume proves very interesting.

Who's Who in Dickens. If at a loss to place any character in Dickens this book will find him for you.

Animal Secrets Told. A book of "Whys." Why are there slits in a cat's eyes? Why have elephants large ears? Why is a horse's mouth shaped as it is? Why has a squirrel a bushy tail? And a hundred other "Whys" in the animal kingdom. Read the book and find out.

Sir Frederick Banbury's Surrender of the British Commons Which the Government Won Unawares and Defeated Rule Bill, Will Not Cause In Cabinet, Says Liberal

London, Nov. 12.—While the House of Commons was debating the special provisions of the home in committee yesterday afternoon, an unexpected vote on an amendment was offered by Sir Frederick Banbury, a Unionist member for the London, resulted in an opposition by a majority of 22.

The Conservatives were just loudly demanded that the Government resign, which, to precedents, it should do vote, which was 228 to 204 genuine test of the strength of Government on the measure.

The temporary defeat of the amendment caused a great political storm, but did not result in a vote. The Cabinet held a meeting and decided to present the amendment in the House to-day which was particularly a demand for confidence, and after some Parliamentary red tape, will endeavor to win Sir Frederick Banbury's amendment and expunged.

The younger Conservatives are the trap for the home rulers, who succeeded in getting a vote which members were in the count number of those in town we from the House, not expecting a portentous business would be taken.

The Government's average on previous details of the bill has been in the neighborhood of 100, there has been much dissension among members of all the parties, the provision compelling the Government of the United Kingdom to contribute to the support of Ireland, a voice in the expenditure money.

The Cabinet Council held yesterday. The Government's defeat lasted to the end of which its decision to resign was announced. At statement, which was issued, that the adoption of the amendment was clearly due to a snap decision which was not even the order paper, and which was destructive of the resolution passed by a majority of 121.

"The Government, therefore, statement concludes, "does not consider that its defeat necessitates change in its program, which respect to home rule, has been seldom short of 100.

There has been considerable criticism by members of the Ministry of the House of Commons financial provisions of the bill. Some 70 Liberal members given voice to their objection to the Irish Parliament being given control of the customs, as they argued that would enable the Irish to introduce protection.

The followers of William Banbury only yesterday morning at their intention of withdrawing from the House during the process of the committee on the financial provisions of the bill.

Quebec, Nov. 12.—It has now come out that the carrying of a lantern on the St. Laurent Beach by a fisherman led to the pilot of the Royal George's mistake.

It appears that the fisherman was visiting his fishery, and as he walked along the beach the lantern was swinging. The Royal George was then coming up the river at full speed, and the pilot seeing the light swaying to and fro, thought it was the light on the buoy at Beaumont Shoal, which is almost immediately opposite St. Laurent Light. He gave orders to port the helm, bringing the vessel nearer the north shore.

ON SNAP VOTE MAY PRESAGE DEFEAT

Ministry Will Not Resign Cause of Defeat.

ck Banbury's Surprise Divided the British Commons, In the Government Was Caught and Defeated on Home Bill, Will Not Cause a Change of Ministry, Says Liberals.

Nov. 12.—While the House was debating the financial provisions of the home rule bill yesterday afternoon, an amendment was introduced by Sir Frederick Banbury, member for the City of London, in an opposition vote of 22.

Members were jubilant and demanded that the Liberal Government resign, which, according to reports, it should do, if the bill was 228 to 206, was a vote of the strength of the Government on the measure.

A virtual defeat of the Government, a great political sensation, did not result in its resignation. The Cabinet held a meeting last night to present a resolution. The House to-day which will vote on a demand for a vote of confidence and after some Parliamentary maneuvering, will endeavor to have Sir Frederick Banbury's amendment defeated and expunged.

Conservative members prepared to support the home rulers and suggesting a vote when many members in the country, and a large number in town were absent, the Government, not expecting that its majority would be taken up, the Government's average majority of 100. But because of much dissatisfaction with the bill, the members of all the parties at the meeting were not so numerous as on compelling the other side of the United Kingdom to contribute to the support of Ireland without the expenditure of the net Council held after the bill's defeat lasted two hours, of which its decision not to be announced. An official statement which was issued, declares that the Government's decision to support the bill was not even put on paper, and which was defeated by the resolution passed Nov. 12.

Government, therefore, the Government concludes, "does not consider its defeat necessitates any change in its program, which, in the new rule, has been supported by 100.

There has been considerable opposition to the Ministerial House of Commons to the provisions of the home rule bill. Liberal members have objected to their objection to the bill being given control, as they argue such a move would enable the Irish Parliament to introduce protection.

Members of William O'Brien yesterday morning announced that during the proceedings of the bill on the financial clauses

Porte Says Soldiers Are Offering a Fierce Resistance.

Announcement May Be Only Preliminary to an Acknowledgment of Disaster—This May Be the Last Great Battle of the Campaign—Austria Falls Into Line With the Allies—Winter Will Stop Fighting.

London, Nov. 12.—Judging by all precedents in the present war, the news from Constantinople last night is the herald of another Turkish defeat at the Tchatalja lines, where a battle has been proceeding for the past two or three days. The Turkish admission that so many wounded are arriving in the capital as to show that the Turks are offering fierce resistance has a great significance, in view of previous admissions of a similar nature, and may be regarded as preparing the public mind for another disappointment. It may be quite possible that this will prove the last great battle of the campaign.

There are indications that Bulgaria may, after all, forego a triumphal entry into Constantinople. According to some reports Bulgaria will be content with finding suitable winter quarters for her army while the peace negotiations are going on and subsequent settlements are being arranged.

The question of mediation has made another step forward in the announcement from Paris last night that the Austrian Government has agreed to join with the other powers in transmitting Turkey's request for mediation to the allies and in enquiring on what terms the allies are disposed to accept mediation.

The revelation of the danger to European peace lying in the antagonistic interests of Austria and Serbia appears to have quickened the sense of the powers and probably of the Balkan states also to the imperative need of working in amicable co-operation to secure a settlement of the Balkan problems acceptable to all the parties concerned.

Another factor making for the speedy cessation of the war is the approach of severe winter conditions, which would give to the campaign an exceedingly arduous character.

There is still talk in Vienna of sending an ultimatum to Serbia, and other warlike reports, but it is believed that Germany is exercising an ameliorating influence in the direction of persuading both Austria and Serbia to consent to a postponement of the settlement until the whole matter can be dealt with by the European conference.

Meanwhile, diplomacy is active in all the European capitals. It is understood that after his important mission at Budapest is concluded, Dr. Daneff, president of the Bulgarian Chamber of Deputies, will go to the other European courts to explain the views of the allies. The Serbian premier, M. Pachitch, after an important Cabinet meeting, left Belgrade last night for Uskup to consult with King Peter on the situation.

The reported mobilization of the Austro-Hungarian forces is denied at Budapest. Roumanian, however, is taking certain military measures with a view to being prepared for eventualities. The War Minister has issued an order to all the army corps to the effect that half the contingent which

MOTHER AND BABE DEAD.

Flamborough W-man and Child Killed In Runaway.

Hamilton, Nov. 12.—Two deaths were caused by a runaway horse at the Valley Inn, just west of the city, about 3.45 yesterday afternoon. Mrs. S. J. Mitchell, wife of a Flamborough Centre farmer, and her six-year-old daughter, Irene, were the victims. They were driving homeward in a single buggy and when descending the steep roadway running under the G.T.R. tracks, the horse they were driving took fright at a passing train and dashed nimbly down the hill. Mrs. Mitchell and her daughter were hurled from the buggy to the roadside, and the little girl was instantly killed. The mother died on the way to the City Hospital in the police patrol, which had hurriedly responded to the emergency call.

The horse continued down the hill and ran into the stable at the Valley Inn and the force of the collision knocked a big hole in the side of the building, but the horse and buggy escaped injury.

The bodies of the mother and daughter were taken to the city morgue. Coroner McNichol was notified of the double fatality, but decided that no inquest was necessary.

A pathetic feature of the unfortunate affair is that the little girl wanted to go to school yesterday morning, but her mother thought the drive to the city would do her good. The horse driven by Mrs. Mitchell was 20 years old and had never run away before.

Mrs. Mitchell was 47 years of age, and had lived in the vicinity of Flamborough Centre all her life. Besides her husband she is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ralph of Carlisle, and by two daughters, and a three months old baby boy.

Constantinople, Nov. 12.—The Bulgarians began an attack on the Turk-fighting continued throughout the day.

Austria Calls Men Home.

Sault Ste. Marie, Nov. 12.—According to reports coming in from foremen and different lumber and construction companies along the line of the Algoma Central, their forces are being depleted and their operations hampered by the calling out of Austrian reserves.

One jobber, whose men were nearly all Austrians, finds himself pretty nearly without workmen with which to go on, and as there are lots of men of this nationality in camps, most of the foremen found themselves in pretty much the same position.

This is the first intimation the Soo had that the Austrian Government was preparing for war to the extent of calling in military reserves from all over the world.

Besides this Bulgarians and Serv-ians continue to leave in large numbers.

Steamer "Rosedale" Ashore.

Sault Ste. Marie, Nov. 12.—News was received in Sault Ste. Marie yesterday morning to the effect that the steamer Rosedale had gone ashore at Drummond Island, four miles east of Detour. A tug and lighter of the Great Lakes Co. left at ten o'clock for the scene of the wreck. The extent of injury to the vessel is unknown, but the fact that the lighter has left leads to the belief that she can be floated and reach the Soo in safety.

Coal Shortage Threatened.

Philadelphia, Nov. 12.—"If the people are patient I see no reason why the public cannot be fully supplied with coal without any suffering," said George P. Baer, president of the Reading Co., in discussing the reported shortage of anthracite coal yesterday. He said the difficulty in the way of increasing the output of coal was primarily due to mine strikes.

Still Going Down.

The decline of two points in the Department of Labor's index number of wholesale prices for the month of July, after a continuous rise for twelve months, was followed in August by another drop, the index number standing at 133.4 as compared with 134.8 the previous month. Last year, however, at this date, it stood at only 127.2.

The decline during August was due chiefly to decreases in prices of grains and fodder, fruits and vegetables, with slight increases in dairy products, fish, metals and coal. These index numbers are percentages of the average prices of some 250 articles during the decade of 1890-1899.

bench. The announcement of this appointment was made by Sir James Whitney yesterday. Mr. McIntyre will assume the chairmanship in the near future.

Mr. McIntyre was born in Kingston and has lived there all his life. He is not well known in Toronto, or in this part of the province. For a number of years he has been in partnership with his brother in the legal business.
It is understood that he is a municipal expert.

Many years ago Mr. McIntyre was city solicitor for Kingston. He was afterwards an alderman, and in 1892-93 he was mayor. He was vice-president of the Ontario Municipal Association in 1905-06; chairman of the board of governors of the Kingston General Hospital in 1904-05; president of the Oddfellows' Relief Association in 1906-07, and at the present time is a trustee of Queen's University, which honorary position he has held for a number of years. He was also educated at Queen's University. Mr. Mc-Intyre is now a member of the Ontario Prison Parole Board, and president of the Golf and Country Club of Kingston.

The new chairman has been a strong Conservative in Kingston for a number of years. In 1905 he contested the constituency against the late Mr.
Pense, the Liberal member, and was defeated by twenty votes. Mr. Mc-Intyre is a Presbyterian.

handed down by Justice Lafontaine, in a case which has been occupying

Are You Blue and Worried?

Nervous? Some of the time really ill? Catch cold easily and frequently suffer from biliousness or headache? The reason is that your system does not rid itself of the poisons in the blood; just as impossible as it is for the grate of a stove to rid itself of clinkers. The waste does to us exactly what the clinkers do to the stove; make the fires burn low until enough clinkers have accumulated and then prevent its burning at all. Your liver is sluggish—you are dull and heavy—sleep does not rest, nor is food appetizing. In this condition illness develops. Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery eradicates the poisons from the body—a glyceric alternative extract made from bloodroot, golden seal and mandrake root, stone and queen's root, without the use of alcohol. No matter how strong the constitution the stomach is apt to be "out of kilter" at times; in consequence the blood is disordered, for the stomach is the laboratory for the constant manufacture of blood.

MRS. BLAKE.

MRS. BENJ. BLAKE, of Port Dover, Ont., Box 36, writes: "I have been a great sufferer for years from throat trouble, catarrh, indigestion, female troubles, bloating, constipation and nervousness—at times I would be in bed, then able to be up again. Was under many different doctors' care, and would get better for a little while, then I would go down with chronic inflammation all through me. For nineteen years I had this poison in my blood. After trying nearly everything I got worse. I read in The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Saxe's Catarrh Remedy. I have taken the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets,' and have used five bottles of Dr. Saxe's Catarrh Remedy. I am now able to do my work and walk with pleasure. I feel like a new woman. I enjoy everything around me and thank God for letting me live long enough to find something that made me well again."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate liver and bowels.

SHORTHAND WRITING.

"Stenography" Not the Only Name by Which It Is Known.

Shorthand writing is known by other names than "stenography." "Tachygraphy" is only one of them. Its second part, of course, comes from the same root as the latter end of "stenography"—that is, from the Greek "grapho," meaning to write. "Tachy" is derived from the Greek "tachys," meaning swift; so only the shorthand writer who has the ability to take down rapid speech and transcribe it quickly has the right to call herself or himself a "tachygrapher." (The "ch" sound is like that of "k.")

"Stenography" comes from "grapho" combined with "stenos," which means "narrow" in Greek. So a "stenographer" is either a narrow writer or she or he practices "narrow writing."

Not so many years ago we heard a good deal about "phonography" as a name for shorthand writing, but the term seems to have gone out of use. It comes from that same useful root "grapho," combined with "phonos." The latter word means "sound," so that a phonographer is one who writes down sound as he hears it. The phonograph is, of course, an instrument for writing or recording sound.

Then there are "brachygraphy" "steganography" and "logography" as other names for what we generally call stenography. In the order given they are derived from "grapho" combined with "brachys," meaning "short;" "steganos," meaning "covered;" "secret" (a stenographer is one who writes in cryptic or mysterious writing, not to be read by the uninitiated) and "logos," meaning "speech."—New York Times.

FIREFLIES IN JAPAN.

Large and Brilliant and Numerous and Not Afraid of Man.

In Japan fireflies are more than mere beetles. They are Cupid's light to guide lovers, souls of ancient soldiers, the devil's snare to tempt wanderers to death. In their light of magic gold with a tint of emerald green the Japanese see stars of hope, sorrows of broken hearts, the everlasting spirits of warriors, but, most of all, the joys of love and lovers.

CANADA'S FENCE.

Surveyors Complete Boundary Line in the North.

Some time in September was the date set a few months ago for the finish of the boundary survey between Canada and Alaska. That work has been going on for seven years, and when the 1912 party of boundary-hunters now on its way out gets back to civilization, there will be left behind away up in the left-hand corner of the continent, a long, narrow fence-line that was mighty hard to cut, and that cost a lot of money. It has been the toughest fencing job that was ever under taken in America, and its completion is something of an international achievement.

Until this boundary was marked out Canada and the United States never knew just where each other's land in the far north began and ended. It was very desirable, as between neighbors, that this should be settled, and seven years ago the two Governments set about the finding out of the line which, in legal terms, had been agreed upon and defined by treaty in 1903. The legal part of it was easy; what was quite certain to be a very different matter was the actual location of the line. Both Governments realized the bigness of the job, and made liberal appropriations for it, and each year since they have sent engineer experts to the north with instructions to mark out every foot of the boundary, whether it should be over glacier peaks or through wilderness swamps.

The job is done now and the long, hard fence-line has been drawn clear to the Arctic. It is known now where Canada's ends and Alaska begins.

The first part of the boundary that was thus located was that from Portland Canal, the southernmost point, to Mount St. Elias. That portion of the line, delimiting a strip of coast country about thirty miles wide, was determined by a number of conspicuous peaks, and thus, as the map shows, it is incurably crooked. But north of Mount St. Elias, so the treaty said, the boundary follows the 141st meridian, straight to the Arctic. That was the part where the hard work was done.

From three to six parties were sent into the field each summer, Canadian and American parties working in conjunction and usually exchanging attaches. There were sometimes as few as eight or ten men in one of these parties, but in the more difficult places as many as thirty or forty men.

PRESS COMMENTS.

Hamilton Herald—Lord Robert slides out of the heads of his critics by blaming the reporters, and that is what we might call poor strategy.

Ottawa Journal—The woman suffrage amendment to the home rule for Ireland bill was 10-1, 314 to 141. Look out for squalls in Ireland.

Brantford Expositor—Joe Cannon, the long gun of the republican party, has been dismantled, and will have opportunity now to smoke his long cigar in the quiet of the family circle.

Hamilton Spectator—Herrings have been selling in England recently at six for a cent. Here, without glorious lake fishery privileges, the price is about one for six cents. Do you note the difference?

Vancouver Province—Mr. Carnegie declares that he would not exchange his American citizenship for a one-way ticket to paradise. The steel magnate prefers remaining in a place where his ownership is less liable to be disputed.

Hamilton Spectator—Guernsey, one of Channel Islands, is but six miles square and supports 40,000 people and 6,000 cattle. With such an example before us Canada is little likely to be overcrowded for some years to come.

Hamilton Spectator—It may be law, as a Winnipeg Judge has decided, for a Government official to travel on a pass, and at the same time charge up his transportation; but a few of the common herd will recognize either equity or common honesty in the practice.

Brantford Expositor—During the last Presidential campaign President Taft made pledges of tariff reduction which were forgotten after the consent was over. Mr. Wilson, if elected, will not likely make this mistake, if for no other reason than that it would be political suicide to do so.

Ottawa Citizen—Francis Neilson, M. P., of England, declared in a lecture in London on Monday last that Edmonton, Alberta, was "the freest city on the face of the earth," by reason of its unique and successful method of taxing land values. The door to similar freedom in Ontario is closed and locked. Sir James Whitney has the key and refuses to give it up.

Globe.—Mr. Borden has not yet repudiated Mr. Laverne's story that he was invited to be a member of the Borden government on the distinct understanding that no naval help of any sort was to be extended to Britain except after a vote of the people. Will the Tory press still deny the unholy alliance of anti-British nationalists and conservative imperialists in September, 1911?

Stratford Herald (Conservative)—There should be no French "Nationalism" in either Quebec or Ontario; it is crass folly in view of the enhancing English-speaking element. We cannot get away, even if we want to, from the fact that it is an English-speaking continent. French-Canadians can defer to that fact without loss or self-respect and with advantage. Nor does it menace their religion, which flourishes as well in the United States, under broader conditions, as in Canada.

Whenever they see the glimmering faint green light of fireflies hovering over the stream running into the darkness of night the Japanese dream of love and loving hearts. The light of fireflies is the guide of lovers going along the narrow paths to meet their sweethearts.

The Japanese fireflies are much larger and give brighter and more steady light than those seen in Europe or America. In old days many poor Japanese students, unable to buy candles, were wont to gather fireflies in a bag and read their books by their light. The Hotaru kago (firefly cage), made of fine laces, placed on the veranda gives almost as bright a light as the large stone lantern, but much more quaint and dreamy.

Fireflies are plentiful everywhere in Japan. They are not at all afraid of human beings and will often alight upon the dress and even on the hair or hands. It is not seldom that fireflies fly into one's pockets or sleeves.—Mock Jaya in Strand.

Giant Sharks.

While the whale is regarded as the largest of creatures that haunt the sea, there are some sharks that can be compared in size with the former animals. These giant sharks, however, are very rare and are known under the name of the great whale shark and the basking shark. The former, which attains a length of fifty feet, is found off the coast of India, Peru and Lower California. The latter's most favorite haunt is the Arctic ocean, but it is also found near the great whale shark. These monsters, curiously enough, are quite harmless. Their teeth are very small, and they feed on tiny matter that floats on the surface of the sea. This matter the fish strains through its enormous gill rakers.

First Man Dressmaker.

One day in 1730 a beautiful carriage appeared on the boulevard of Paris with an escutcheon in the shape of a pair of corsets and an open pair of scissors painted on the panel of each door. This was the coat of arms of Rhomberg, the first man who made a name as a woman's dressmaker. Rhomberg, who was the son of a Bavarian peasant from the neighborhood of Munich, owed his rapid success to his genius for concealing and remedying defects of figure. He left an annual income of 50,000 francs to his heirs.

"This seems like a sweet dream," he rapturously remarked as he lingered with her at the door step.
"It doesn't seem like a dream to me," she replied, "for a dream soon vanishes, you know."
He vanished.

From three to six parties were sent into the field each summer, Canadian and American parties working in conjunction and usually exchanging attaches. There were sometimes as few as eight or ten men in one of these parties, but in the more difficult places as many as thirty or forty men. The Departments at Ottawa and Washington sent as leaders men known to be skilled in topographical arts, and the rank and file of the men who served under them were picked up in Vancouver and Seattle. From these coast ports the boundary-hunters set out in May of each year, with big outfits, and some four or five weeks later they began their actual season's work in the mountain wildernesses of the north. In late September or October they pulled out again. One of the stiffest problems in the whole undertaking was always the transportation of supplies. One year, when working east of Fort Wrangel, the surveyors were two months in getting to the scene of operations, only fifty miles from the coast.

It is about six hundred miles from Mount St. Elias to the coast of the Arctic, by the beeline route of the 141st. The boundary-hunters have therefore averaged nearly a hundred miles each season, though in one or two years they made only some fifty or sixty miles, where the country was particularly rough. The weather had a good deal to do with it, too, for there is as much climatic variety in the far north as elsewhere, and sometimes the elements are very tricky. Violent storms frequently occur in high altitudes, and fine weather cannot be depended upon for long at a time.

In addition, accurate maps were made, showing the topography of the country for two miles on each side of the line. Every year the survey parties have not only left their marks behind them, but they have brought out with them at the end of their season's work a mass of data and technical information that has an international importance.—Aubrey Fullerton in Toronto Star Weekly.

Victoria Times—Most persons probably believe that much of the milk now being sold is quite artificial enough. They will therefore, for a time at least, entertain quite a pardonable prejudice against the newest German discovery — artificial milk manufactured from vegetables. It is, however, claimed for this new milk that it is more digestible, its cream more nourishing, and being free from germs, it will keep longer than cow's milk.

London Advertiser—Hon. Mackenzie King, in his brilliant and really eloquent speech at Hyman Hall, asserted that the proposal of an emergency contribution was a trick to enable the Borden government to evade its pledge to submit its naval policy to the people. This is the only explanation. The emergency exists only in the cabinet at Ottawa. The only men who know whether there is an emergency in the relation of Great Britain and Germany are the British cabinet ministers, and they deny its existence.

Woodstock Sentinel-Review—So, too, a man may not be a total abstainer, and yet be firmly convinced of the wisdom of separating the selling of liquor from the business of hotel-keeping. It is even conceivable that a man engaged in the business of hotel-keeping might honestly favor the abolition of the bar for the reason that the legitimate business of hotel-keeping would thereby be improved. On the other hand, a man may be a total abstainer himself, and yet, for party or other reasons, be but a poor friend of temperance legislation. It is clear that the task before the temperance electors is not quite so simple as it may appear at first sight. They must judge carefully, but not narrowly.

Vancouver Sunset—News of the appointment of Hon. Robert Rogers as Minister of Public Works will bring joy to his supporters, sometimes known as "heelers" in a caselike this, through Manitoba. Yet it was rather unkind of the Western Associated Press to carefully point out the fact that Mr. Rogers would have supervisory control of expenditures amounting to forty million dollars. According to the commandments, envy is a spirit to be avoided religiously, but incitement to envy is even less praiseworthy. Boss Charles Murphy of Tammany will feel aggrieved when he reads of the luck of his worthy disciple. And, speaking about unkindness, one cannot help but recall the question recently asked: "Which would you rather be: Bob Rogers with the portfolio of Public Works or a bartender in the Waldorf-Astoria without a cash register?"

A TWISTER OF WORDS

DEAN SPOONER OF OXFORD IS VICTIM OF MANY STORIES.

The Celebrated Educationist Whose Name Has Become Affixed to the Mental Disease Which Consists In Muddling Up Phrases Is the Butt of Scores of Fictitious Stories of Funny Transpositions.

Probably few men have had so many wholly apocryphal tales about them as Spooner, the learned but timid Dean of New College, Oxford. It is inevitable that at a university, as in wider fields of life, someone will be made a butt, and Spooner, perhaps owing to his nervousness, soon came to fill this position.

It was just a position which had formerly been occupied by Jowett, who was, however, more respected than his successor owing to the real wit which he undoubtedly possessed. Yet it is said that when, on a certain occasion, a series of choice Spoonerisms were recited to Jowett, he was much amused thereby, and remarked, "Fifteen years ago they used to tell all these about me."

Be that as it may, generations of undergraduates have exercised their ingenuity in fabricating examples. Most people, indeed, at some time or other have unwittingly made a Spoonerism, which, as nearly everybody knows, consists of a transposition of the initial letters of two or more words in the same sentence.

How did Dr. Spooner first obtain his unenviable celebrity? Some of the best-known examples attributed to the head of New College are supposed to have been made at table or in the college chapel. The best known anecdote of all is the one which refers to the hymn, "Conquering kings their titles take," which the dean is supposed to have solemnly given out as "Tinquering kongs their titles kake," then, nervously noticing his error, to have altered the line to the famous expression, Kinquernig kongs their titles take."

This was the first and original Spoonerism, and around it numberless others, good and indifferent, have sprung up, all, of course, ascribed to the individual who is alleged to have perpetrated the first.

One of the quaintest mixups put down to him is a phrase he once used in a sermon. Speaking of the vague, half-formed wish so often experienced in the mind, he said, "We all knew what it is to hold a half-warmed fish in our bosoms." On another occasion he gave out the following text: "Sorrow may endure for a joy, but night cometh in the morning"; then, again, he spoke of the wicked men whose words were "as ears and sparrows," and the first line of the well-known hymn which starts, "From Greenland's icy mountains," he once quite seriously read out as "From Iceland's Greasy mountains."

One Sunday when he was not officiating in the service, he was surprised to find someone occupying his pew in chapel, and addressed him sternly with, "Are you aware, sir, that you are occupewing my pie?"

At the table he rarely "opened his mouth but he puts his foot in it"—metaphorically speaking, of course. Once when he wanted some figs he is said to have electrified a luncheon party by asking a lady to pass the pigs' fleas. Those who know the doctor would understand at once that he was merely asking for "The figs, please."

At the same luncheon he is said to have asked his neighbor to have "some of this stink puff," pointing to an ornamental dish of pink jelly. Late for dinner one night he sidled into the room with the explanation that he had been "hatching a posty snipe." Even an old friend would take a moment or two to translate this into "snatching a hasty pipe."

His poetical description of a gipsy encampment as "a tipsy gent pitched in a pot of grease," was even more complicated. Of course, he meant "a gipsy tent pitched in a groat of peace." His description of his baggage to a railway porter as "two rags and a bug" was simpler.

To a relation who was about to start on a bicycle tour he remarked, "You will not forget to boil your icycle before you start."

Again, returning tired from a long walk, he observed, "I must have walked ten miles as the fly crows."

Just as there are numbers of people daily perpetrating Malapropisms of speech, so there are many unconsciously doing their utmost to perpetuate the memory of quaint little Dr. Spooner. For instance, the actor who said, "Stand back, my lord, and let the parson cough" (instead of "coffin pass") may have made a solitary slip, but in some persons "lapsus lingue" amounts to a veritable infirmity.

An excellent clergyman was the delight of the more frivolous among his hearers, because he was never known to preach a sermon without introducing a reference to a "farren big tree," or dwelling on the fact that "Many are called, but chew are fosen;" ending the text with the impressing exhortation, "Be ye therefore of the fosen chew."

"Spoonerisms?" said a friend of the writer. "My wife nearly startled a local grocer out of his wits with one some months ago, and he has always eyed her suspiciously ever since. We had just settled down in the suburb when he called, asking for our custom, and inquiring whether he should tell his vanman to call every day. Now, we have dealt at the stores for years, and my wife tried to tell him so. But what she really said was, 'No, thanks, please don't. I steal at the doors.'"

A good Spoonerism went the rounds quite recently. A fine, dignified old lady descended to her kitchen, where tasty fish were being grilled. She sniffed disapprovingly, as the aroma reached her, and cried out, "Oh, dear, what a hell of smerriings."

The Leap Year Dance.

Last Friday night a large and happy crowd of young people assembled at the Oddfellow's Hall to enjoy the finest dance of the year. The members of the fair sex had their innings this time and they certainly showed the boys how to make such an evening a success. Out of twenty-six dances there were only two which were not Leap Year. In this way the feelings of the boys and girls were interchanged and each knew what the others suffered at the ordinary dances. The fellows knew what it was to sit out dances and the girls found out how hard it was to remember with whom they had the next dance. There was one thing about this dance which was very popular with every one, and that was that the dance started very much earlier, but that does not say that it known names knew what it was to sit out dances and the girls found out how hard it was to remember with whom they had the next dance. There was one thing about this dance which was very popular with every one, and that was that the dance started very much earlier, but that does not say that it got out any sooner. The table was loaded with all kinds of delicacies for the supper and everyone enjoyed the good things provided, even though Jessop's were open until 11.30 that night. The music was by our favorite, Miss Lee, of Gananoque, also two extras by two of our N. C. I. girls. We are indebted to four of our N. C. I. girls for this delightful evening and we sincerely hope that our Commencement Dance will be as great a success.

W. C. T. U.

To all workers there come times of depression, when the work already accomplished shrinks to nothingness in comparison with what has to be done and members of the W. C. T. U., or of other organizations in favor of the temperance cause are no exceptions to this. So, with temperance Sunday just passed, a few facts as to the progress of the temperance cause throughout the world, may not come amiss. According to the report compiled from the facts obtained at the Second Biennial Conference of the International Prohibition Conference, which met at the Hague in Sept. of last year, the cause of temperance abroad has been steadily growing. In Finland, Norway, Sweden, and Denmark there have been marked gains. In New Zealand a majority voted for prohibition when the referendum was submitted to the people, though not the required 3/4 majority. In the United States prohibition has made wonderful strides so that now about half its population lives under local or state prohibition. In Canada, too, there are encouraging facts to notice. In both Ontario and Quebec the reduction of licenses has been very great, and now in Ontario, with the Conservative and Liberal parties vying with each other as to temperance legislation, we may surely hope for even more marked progress.

How To Tell If Your Hair Is Diseased.

Even if you have a luxuriant head of hair, you may want to know whether it is in a healthy condition or not. 98% of the people need a hair tonic.

Pull a hair out of your head, if the bulb at the end of the root is white and shrunken, it proves that the hair is diseased and requires prompt attention if its loss would be avoided. If the bulb is pink and full, the hair is healthy.

We want everyone whose hair requires treatment to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. We promise that it shall not cost anything if it does not give satisfactory results. It is designed to overcome dandruff, relieve scalp irritation, to stimulate the hair roots, tighten the hair already in the head, grow hair and overcome baldness.

It is because of what Rexall "93" Hair Tonic has done and our sincere faith in its goodness that we want you to try it at our risk. Two sizes, 50c. and $1.00. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store. T. B. Wallace, druggist.

It is a miracle of discipline keeps his words from over one another. He is grammatic in his speaking, are bright thoughts in every he says. His particular hold training of boys so that, to own words, "they should be good but good for something also advocates that they taught, if they have a relation work at it."

A story is told of an occasion that was due to Mr. Carleton speaking, which makes it difficult for people to keep pace with him. He was talking to boys and to bring home to them their ability for the country's future scribed the influential men to be seen at any time about and went on to say they gone in a few years. "Who their place?" he asked.

"We will!" shouted the boys. "Then look at the gamblers, the drunkards and efficient men," went on Mr. Carleton and after a brief description of his question, "Who will place?"

"We will!" shouted the boys were mentally breathless.

1200 cattle, 1800 sheep and lambs, 2500 pigs and 300 calves.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for cattle this morning and prices declined 25c to 50c per cwt., as compared with a week ago. At the above reduction demand was fairly good for best stock and sales of full loads of choice steers averaged from $5.75 to $6, while good steers and heifers weighing from 900 to 1000 lbs. each, brought $5.25 to $5.50, and mixed loads of cows, steers and heifers, $4.75 to $5 per cwt. The top price paid for picked lots of choice steers was $6.25. The supply of canning stock was fairly large, for which the demand was good and an active trade was done in this line at $2 to $2.75 for cows and at $3 to $3.15 for bulls.

There was no change in the condition of the market for small meats, prices being firm under a good demand and as the supply was fairly large an active trade was done. Ontario lambs sold at $6.25 to $6.50 and Quebec at $5.75 to $6 per cwt.
The demand for calves was good and sales of milk-fed stock were made at 5c to 7c and grass fed at 2 1/4c to 3c per lb.

An easy feeling prevailed in the market for hogs, but as the supply was smaller than usual prices showed little change as compared with a week ago, sales of selected lots being made at $8.50 to $8.75

Pastor Russell Claims Report of the International Bible Students Association Committee, of Which He Was Chairman, Was Too Mild Rather Than Too Severe—Committee Unanimously Stand by the Report and Challenge Criticisms.

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 10. — Pastor Russell as usual here had large audiences. We report one of his interesting discourses on the live subject of Foreign Missions, which is stirring Christendom. His text was, "This Gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." (Matt. 24:14.) He said:

A year ago the International Bible Students' Association sent a Committee of Seven to investigate missionary prospects in foreign lands—especially in South India, where it is making a special effort. I was one of the Committee, otherwise composed of four successful business men, one doctor, and General Hall, of the U.S.A. The Committee made its report, to one of the largest Christian gatherings ever held in New York City in the Hippodrome—on March 31st. Its report, published in pamphlet form, reached a very wide circulation amongst Christian people. As a considerable quantity is still on hand, I am authorized to offer the remainder free, one copy each, to all interested in Foreign Mission work. A post card addressed to "I.B.S.A., Brooklyn, N.Y.," requesting a copy of the Missionary Report, will receive prompt attention, as long as the supply holds out.

The Committee, in preparing this report, laid bare the facts in as gently and kindly a manner as possible. Every one of them being deeply interested in the heathen, every one of them a sincere Christian, what else could they do?

Now, as the Committee feared, their report, which so many Christian people gratefully acknowledged, has irritated a few persons. These, evidently, feared that we have discredited their fairy tales respecting the immediate conversion of the world by human instrumentality and more millions of money. We sympathize with these enthusiasts, who seem to shut their eyes to facts, while hoping against hope to maintain exploded theories. One of these, Mr. W. T. Ellis, alias the "Religious Rambler," attacks our report. Falsely he declares that we journeyed on the same vessel from San Francisco to Shanghai, giving the impression that we had not visited Japan at all; that we merely raced through the country, did not visit all the mission stations, nor talk with all missionaries; and he demands how we could know anything on the subject of our report. Our Report tells the facts. The Committee of Seven scattered and spent six days in Japan, or

TAINTING THE NEWS

Ottawa, November 7th. approaching session of Parliament the necessity for Mr. Borden forward without delay "emergency" Naval propositions, evident effort by the Government papers throughout Canada the Imperial emergency. This is particularly opportune calculated not only to pay for the expedient by which I hopes to put off the present permanent naval policy, but to detract attention from Mr. own emergency cabinet trou

Apparently this campaign engineered in a particularly manner, by using British newspapers as a way as to convey misapprehensions. In this way at news calculated to foment "emergency" scare is magnified, and contemptuous reference to authoritative statements of members of the Imperial Government to the reverse effect. In the Jingo on both sides of the Atlantic have an active ally Lord Roberts, who, unshackled by ability, and desirous of the ascension in England, is a voice his traditional military occasions. The veteran soldier apparently being made use of German peril shouters just a Party of Canada a few years Lord Dundonald.

This campaign has been paid in evidence since Lord Roberts' outbreak at Manchester. The which supply the Canadian ment press were loaded with ports of this speech, grossly tainting its importance and at time trying to belittle the report evoked from the only persons who could so ministers of His Majesty's ment.

The manner in which this is being worked is pretty well up by two paragraphs which singular coincidence, have appeared in all the Government papers at a time. In the course of a careful examination of material, some of which were news, were interpolated paragraphs of a strongly partisan nature. "Lord Roberts has been published for indiscretion in his Manchester speech by two Ministers, Edward Grey and Mr. Borden, whose treatment of the veteran has aroused much indignation again in the same article for report of the launch of the "Duke" was inserted in this paper. Thus barely a week elapsed the launch and the starting construction, instead of mounting as formerly usual. Such tactics are abhorrent to the fair-minded Canadians to judge of the unbecomingness with which Britain availed herself of Borden's announcement of Policy in November.

The facts are, however, that the violence of Lord Roberts' preparation for Germany" spelled the Government to cautionary steps to prevent breaks of this old soldier from trouble. Germany of course ignored his speech, but it was snapped up by the German papers.

Sir Edward Grey, the British Minister, gravely dealt with the subject and administered a sharp rebuke to Lord Roberts when he appeared in Parliament "I should very much regret any suggestion that the Government (Great Britain

Our Ben.

Ben Franklin was a man of might.
Of him we should be mighty proud,
For he went out one stormy night
And snatched the lightning from the cloud.

What would we do without it, pray?
We hitch it to the trolley car
And calmly go upon our way
And hardly get a jolt or jar.

For many centuries of time
The lightning was an awful shirk.
Though sometimes it indulged in crime,
It never did a stroke of work
Until Ben Franklin came along
And rigged his kite in wondrous style
And said: "Now, you are good and strong.
Come down and work for us awhile."

And now it makes the wheels go round;
It has to run the motorcar,
And on the wires underground
It carries messages afar.
It bales our hay, it chops our meat
And does a lot of other things.
It serves us as both hands and feet
And arms and legs and spreading wings.

How could we ever live without
The lightning, I would like to know?
I fear we could not get about.
At least the going would be slow.
So here's to Ben, and make it loud,
The grand philosopher and sage!
He snatched the lightning from the cloud
And gave us the electric age.

Was He?

When Hon. Wm. Lyon Mackenzie King was Liberal candidate for North Waterloo, in an election some years ago, he sometimes stayed at the home of one of the Liberal workers. The little four-year-old son, who had become very much attached to Mr. King, was taught at Sunday school about King David. He listened very attentively all through the lesson, and when the teacher was through he was very much surprised by her asking, "Please, teacher, was King David a Grit?"

Japan at all, that we merely traced through the country, did not visit all the mission stations, nor talk with all missionaries; and he demands how we could know anything on the subject of our report. Our Report tells the facts. The Committee of Seven scattered and spent six days in Japan, or a total of 42 days of investigation. Our 23 days spent in India, similarly reported, would be equivalent to nearly six months' investigation by one person. Our I.B.S.A. Committee was not commissioned to investigate missions, nor to ask missionaries to corroborate reports promulgated by missionary societies.

As for myself, this critic charges in one breath that I did not preach the sermons which appeared in the newspapers of the world; and in the next breath he declares that I spent all of my time in preaching, and therefore had not time for investigation. A discerning public can read between the lines of such criticism what the Bible symbolically describes as "gnashing of teeth."

Our Committee took the only proper course for ascertaining and obtaining the facts. Every missionary and every other person visiting in foreign lands within the last five years, on reading our report will concede that it is truthful, kind and sympathetic. Surely our Committee's method and report will commend themselves to unprejudiced minds. Probably Brother Ellis' difficulty is fear that the holowness of missionary claims is coming to the light.

Foreign Mission work taught by the Scriptures generally is wholly different from that attempted during the past century, under the postmillennial theory that the Church is to conquer the world for Christ and to bring about a thousand years' reign of righteousness, after which Christ's Second Advent will come and those blessed conditions obliterated by the burning up of the world. This theory, set forth in nearly all of our creeds, is supplemented by the theory that all dying in ignorance of Christ and outside of sainthood, are passing to an eternity of torture. These unscriptural, God-dishonoring teachings have enthused many good people to save the heathen from the fate which they say God Himself had foreordained for them.

This frenzied view, misnamed the Gospel, has been presented to the heathen with little appreciable effect, just as in civilized lands. The whole theory is wrong. What the whole world needs, is the True Bible Message, stripped of the ignorance and superstition of the Dark Ages.

The Bible teaches the Premillennial Coming of Christ—that the Second Coming of Jesus must take place first, and His Kingdom be established in power and great glory and Satan bound. The rising Sun of Righteousness, Messiah's Kingdom, will cause the knowledge of the glory of God to fill the whole earth, dissolving all the mists of bigotry and superstition, and helping humanity back to perfection.

ROXBOROUGH PLACE, CALGARY

IT gives the writer a real journalistic thrill of satisfaction to be in a position to say a word or two about the property being offered by F. C. Lowes & Company, of Calgary, known as Roxborough Place. The fact that "Freddy" Lowes is using the columns of SATURDAY NIGHT as an advertising medium at the present time, to bring this property before the attention of readers, is perhaps the only reason I know of why this little appreciation should possibly not be written. However, this journal is compelled so often to speak disrespectfully, not to say slightly, of many advertised western and eastern real estate propositions, that the opportunity to say something pleasant about a property which needs no recommendation to those who have seen it, is welcomed. Roxborough Place is the title, and it is a name that means something, whereas seven out of ten (possibly 8 out of ten) of the slippery subdivisions are parading under titles which have no relation in meaning to the real character of the stuff exploited. What F. C. Lowes did was to select a large tract which seemed somehow to have been overlooked by the other developers, and convert it through the expenditure of a good deal of money, into a residential area just across the river from Calgary itself.
There is a bridge over the river, and Roxborough Place is easy of access. Before long, street cars will run right past the property. The tract was graded, concrete walks were laid, shade trees were planted, water and sewers have been put in I imagine; natural difficulties in the way of hills on two sides of the property were simply hydraulicked off their forbiddingness, and are now terraced into added beauties of the district. The situation of this subdivision, to call it such, is admirable, and I imagine it will sell like hot cakes. It ought to, for in the writer's somewhat extended tour through the west, no more legitimate bit of real estate engineering was encountered. This may sound like so much paid-for advertising, but it is nothing of the sort. For the past three months a large halftone showing the original tract the drawing of how Roxborough Place would look after "treatment" and including a photograph of Mr. Lowes has been held in these offices merely awaiting an opportunity to be inserted into the news pages. Said cut was so large, however, that it has so far been impossible to use it. I don't know what prices will be asked for this beautiful bit of Calgary, but if they run as I think they will, I would call this choice buying—about as good as the best.

NOTE--The above article was written by Mr. Norman Harris, Financial Editor of Toronto Saturday Night, and it appeared in the Nov. 2nd issue of that publication. The article is of exceptional importance, as Mr. Harris has been particularly active in criticising Western investments, and is the terror of all sub-divisors.

F. C. Lowes & Co., owners of Roxborough Place, are also owners of the choicest sub-divisions in Calgary, Edmonton, Saskatoon, Medicine Hat, and Lethbridge, and will be pleased to submit full particulars to anyone interested in making an investment in High Class Western Real Estate.

oil's duties are chiefly advisory and so limited that if it undertook to advise the Foreign Office on any question of foreign policy it would probably be diplomatically advised to mind his own business.

Canada is already well represented in London and can at any time deal directly with the Imperial Government through the Colonial Office. Adopting the circumbandibus route of representation in an ornamental defence council with the other overseas dominions would hardly seem, even to the most pronounced Jingo an adequate return for $30,000,000 of Canadian money. Perhaps the Nationalist wing of the coalition Government will be able, with Mr. Armand Lavergne's consent, to suggest some better method.

AFTER MR. PELLETTIER'S SCALP.

The joke of the anti-parliament campaign has been Mr. Armand Lavergne's challenge to Hon. Mr. Pelletier to explain why he has betrayed the Nationalist cause for the flesh-pots of office, and the Post Master General's very prudent refusal to do any such thing. That, however, did not prevent the young Nationalist leader from saying a few things at Indian Lorette which put the Nationalist wing of the cabinet in a most invidious position, and one which must have surprised the good Tories of Ontario by showing them the manner in which Premier Borden was prepared to capitulate in wholesale fashion to the Nationalists and was dictated to by them in forming his coalition Cabinet.

Mr. Lavergne said that when Mr. Monk was appointed Minister of Public Works he (Lavergne) had been invited to join the coalition, but refused on obvious grounds which the recent Cabinet crisis with Mr. Monk's resignation have amply justified. But when refusing office for himself young Mr. Lavergne with Mr. Monk, dictated to the Premier who the other two Quebec Ministers should be, even overshadowing the influence of Sir Rodolphe Forget so as to keep Mr. T. Chase Casgrain out. And when Mr. Pelletier was notified of his appointment he asked Mr. Monk if any guarantee had been given of a plebiscite on the Navy question. Apparently he got enough answer to permit him to accept office, but not enough to keep Mr. Monk in.

But what is even of greater significance is the light Mr. Lavergne's declarations throw on the price Mr. Borden was prepared to pay for power. What does Canada think of Mr. Borden's patriotism in offering Mr. Armand Lavergne a Cabinet portfolio because of his opposition to any help for Britain? What will the people of England think? As the truth is becoming better known the people of the old land and the new are getting the true measure of Mr. Borden.

To all this Hon. Mr. Pelletier replies that he regrets the stand Mr. Lavergne has taken. No one would doubt the truth of this statement. Then without approaching the real gravamen of Mr. Lavergne's charge, the Post Master General once more side steps the issue by declaring that Canada is part of the British Empire and that Lavergne and Bourassa are now opposing the Government out of pique because they could not dictate to the Conservative Party. He omits to mention that Lavergne and Bourassa still stick to the policy which gave himself and Mr. Nantel Cabinet seats and compelled Hon. Mr. Monk to resign his. The more the Post Master General attempts to excuse himself the deeper in the mire he gets.

INCOMPETENCE OR WORSE.

Ottawa, November 7th.—A result of the persistent refusal of the Minister of Labour to appoint an Industrial Board to consider the difficulties between the C.P.R. and the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees a strike has taken place. It is not yet known how far this strike will extend but it is claimed by President Mosher of the brotherhood that it will involve from three to five thousand members and result in great loss to them, to the Railway, and to the business interests of the country.

Just why the Minister of Labour refused to appoint an Industrial Board and undertook to carry on negotiations single-handed does not appear on the surface. Possibly the control of the interests and the close alliance between the C.P.R. and the Conservative Party may have had something to do with it. However that may be the Minister's policy seems to have been dictated by the company and his action highly arbitrary. The C.P.R. refused to deal with the Union; the Minister refused to grant the Board. But Hon. Mr. Crothers claims to have secured ameliorations in working conditions which would satisfy the employees—this in the fact of an ultimatum given by the Union Brotherhood that unless they secured a satisfactory adjustment of their demands for a Board to consider them by ten o'clock Monday morning they would strike. The Minister has disclosed incapacity to realize the gravity of the situation or has arbitrarily refused to give to the workmen the benefit of the means of redress which Parliament intended they should have, and the strike order was issued sharp on time. Through his refusal to the Labour Legislation, carefully devised and successfully to be put into operation Mr. Crothers has precipitated a strike which may have serious results. Mr. Crothers' arbitrary action in siding with the Company and refusing the men a Board is in striking contrast to the practice of his predecessor in office, Hon. Mackenzie King, who, when corporations objected, and there were grounds for believing that a strike would take place, never failed to establish a Board of Investigation, and to himself name a representative for the company where the Company refused.

The excuse given by Hon. Mr. Crothers for his inaction was that the demands of the Brotherhood included employees under some thirty-six different headings and that no one board could deal with these. This is little more than a confession of inability to deal with a situation because it presents some difficulties. Other boards have dealt with just as complicated railway disputes successfully in the past, and that without entering into the details of each subdivision of labour, but by establishing broad rules which were successfully worked out afterwards. The present Government appears not only unable to enact useful legislation but incapable of applying that which it inherited from the Laurier regime.

In the first place, there is a little intriguing woman named Bonacieux."

"She is in the prison of Nantes."

"That is to say, she was there," replied milady, "but the queen has obtained an order from the king by means of which she has been conveyed to a convent. I desire to know which."

"I see nothing inconvenient in that," said the cardinal.

"Well, now I have an enemy much more to be dreaded by me than this expressly from the other world to have the pleasure of paying you a visit. Sit down, madame, and let us talk."

Milady, under the influence of inexpressible terror, sat down without uttering a word.

"You certainly are a demon sent upon the earth!" said Athos. "I thought I had crushed you, madame, but either I was deceived or hell has resuscitated you!"

Milady, at these words which recalled frightful remembrances, hung down her head with a suppressed groan. She arose. Athos remained sitting.

"I wish to tell you that, while remaining invisible to your eyes, I have not lost sight of you."

"You know what I have done and been?"

"I can relate to you day by day your actions from your entrance into the service of the cardinal to this evening."

A smile of incredulity passed over the pale lips of milady.

He recounted to her all he knew of her history, learned from D'Artagnan instant he left the trenches to come to the quarters of the musketeers.

Milady thought it best to preserve silence, to set off discreetly, to accomplish her difficult mission with her usual skill, and then, all things being performed to the satisfaction of the cardinal, to come back and claim her vengeance.

In consequence, after having traveled all night, at 7 o'clock she was at Fort la Pointe, at 8 o'clock she had embarked, and at 9 the vessel, which, with letters of marque from the cardinal, was supposed to be sailing for Bayonne, raised anchor and steered its course toward England.

On arriving at the lodging of his three friends D'Artagnan found them assembled.

"Gentlemen," said he, "I hope what you have to tell me is worth the trouble, or else I warn you I will not pardon you for making me come here instead of getting a little rest after a night spent in taking and dismantling a bastion. Ah, why were you not there, gentlemen? It was warm work."

"Aramis," said Athos, "you went to breakfast the day before yesterday at the Inn of the Parpaillot, I believe? I want to know if nobody interrupted you."

"Why, I think there were not many intruders. We shall do very comfortably at the Parpaillot."

On their way they met with Grimaud. Athos made him a sign to come with him. Grimaud, according to custom, obeyed in silence. The poor lad had nearly come to the pass of forgetting how to speak.

Unfortunately, the hour was badly chosen for a private conference. D'Arbreakfast was ready. He stand guard.

"And now to table," said D'Artagnan. The four friends sat down on the ground.

"And now," said D'Artagnan, "there is no longer a fear of being heard, I hope you are going into this momentous secret."

"The secret is," said Athos, "that I saw milady last night with leagues of this place at the cote."

"In that case I am a lost man," said D'Artagnan.

"Not quite so yet," replied Athos, "for by this time she must be on the shores of France."

D'Artagnan breathed again. "But, after all," asked Porthos, "is milady?"

"A very charming woman," said Athos, "who has demanded the head of the cardinal."

"What is demanding the head of the cardinal?" cried D'Artagnan with terror. "Then it is a struggle any longer. I must blow my brains out. I can cope with such enemies. But I am my unknown man of Mont de Wardes, to whom I have three wounds; next milady, I have discovered, and worst, the cardinal, whose vengeance I have balked."

"Well," said Athos, "that is four, and we are four, one for each."

"If we may believe the maud is making we are able to do with a very different set of folks," said Porthos.

"What's the matter, Grimaud?" said Athos. "What do you see?"

"Sixteen pioneers, four soldiers, and four musketeers."

"How far distant?"

"Five hundred paces."

"Good! We have just time to get this fowl and to drink our wine to your health, D'Artagnan."

Then Athos arose carelessly, musket next to him and drew one of the loopholes.

Porthos, Aramis and D'Artagnan followed his example. As they received orders to place themselves in the hands of the four friends, in order to receive their weapons.

"Well," said Athos, "it is worth while to disturb our twenty fellows armed with mattocks and shovels."

"They are advancing very fast," said D'Artagnan. "Beside, in addition to the pioneers, there are soldiers and a brigadier armed with muskets."

"That's because they don't want to be shot."

"I must confess I feel a great anxiety to fire on these poor fellows."

"In truth," said Athos, "it is right. I will warn them."

CHAPTER XXXV.

The Bastion Saint Germain.

ATHOS mounted on his horse with his musket in his hand and his hat in the other.

"Gentlemen," said Athos, "I am dressing the soldiers and plorers astonished at his appearance, fifty paces from the bastion, firing courteously to them; and tailed an order from the king by means of which she has been conveyed to a convent. I desire to know which."

"I see nothing inconvenient in that," said the cardinal.

"Well, now I have an enemy much more to be dreaded by me than this little Mme. Bonacieux. It is her lover, that wretch D'Artagnan!"

"He is a bold fellow," said the cardinal. "I must have a proof of his connection with Buckingham. Get me that proof, and I will send him to the Bastille."

"So far, good, monseigneur. But afterward?"

"When once in the Bastille there is no afterward!" said the cardinal in a low voice. "Give me paper, a pen and some ink."

"Here they are, monseigneur."

"We have heard all it was necessary we should hear," said Athos, in a low voice. "Besides, don't prevent you from listening, but I must be gone."

"You must be gone!" said Porthos. "And if the cardinal asks for you, what answer can we make?"

"You will not wait till he asks; you will speak first and tell him that I am gone on the lookout, because certain expressions of our host's have given me reason to think the road is not safe. I will say two words about it to the cardinal's attendant likewise; the rest concerns myself, don't be uneasy about that."

CHAPTER XXXIV.

A Conjugal Scene.

AS Athos had foreseen, it was not long before the cardinal came down. He found Porthos playing an earnest game at dice with Aramis.

"What is become of M. Athos?" asked he.

"Monseigneur," replied Porthos, "he is gone as a scout, upon some words of our host, which made him believe the road was not safe."

"Well, will you return now with me?"

"We are at your eminence's orders."

The attendant was at the door holding the cardinal's horse by the bridle.

Let us leave him to follow the road to the camp protected by his attendant and the two musketeers and return to Athos.

For some distance he maintained the pace at which he started, but when out of sight he turned his horse to the right, made a circuit and came back within twenty paces of a high hedge, to watch the passage of the little troop. Having recognized his companions and the cardinal's, he waited till they had turned the angle of the road, and having lost sight of them, he returned at a gallop to the inn.

The host recognized him.

"My officer," said Athos, "has forgotten to give a piece of very important information to the lady."

"Go up," said the host. "She is still in her chamber."

Athos went straight into the chamber and closed the door after him.

"Do you know me, madame?" said he.

Milady made one step forward and then drew back as if she had seen a serpent.

"So far well," said Athos, "I perceive you know me."

"The Count de la Fere!" murmured milady, becoming exceedingly pale.

"Yes, milady," replied Athos, "the Count de la Fere in person, who comes and overheard during her interview with the cardinal.

"You must be Satan!" cried she.

"Perhaps," said Athos, "But at all events listen well to this. Assassinate the Duke of Buckingham or cause him to be assassinated, I care very little about that. But touch a single hair of D'Artagnan, who is a faithful friend, whom I love and defend, and I swear to you by the head of my father the crime which you shall have endeavored to commit or shall have committed shall be the last."

"M. d'Artagnan has cruelly insulted me," said milady in a hollow tone.

"M. d'Artagnan shall die."

Athos reached his hand to his belt, drew forth a pistol and cocked it.

Milady, pale as a corpse, endeavored to cry out, but her swollen tongue could utter no more than a hoarse sound.

Athos slowly raised his pistol, stretched out his arm so that the weapon almost touched milady's forehead and then in a voice the more terrible from having the supreme calmness of a fixed resolution:

"Madame," said he, "you will this instant deliver to me the paper the cardinal signed or upon my soul I will blow your brains out. You have one second to decide."

Milady saw by the contraction of his countenance that the trigger was about to be pulled. She reached her hand quickly to her bosom, drew out a paper and held it toward Athos.

"Take it," said she, "and be accursed!"

Athos took the paper, returned the pistol to his belt, approached the lamp to be assured that it was the paper, unfolded it and read:

It is by my order and for the good of the state that the bearer of this has done what he has done. RICHIEU. Dec. 3, 1627.

"And now," said Athos, resuming his cloak and putting on his hat, "now that I have drawn your teeth, viper, bite if you can."

And he left the chamber without once looking behind him.

Then he leaped lightly into the saddle and set out at full gallop, intercepting the cardinal and his companions and receiving Richelieu's praise for his watchfulness.

The three friends did not exchange a single word till they got to their quarters except to give the watchword to the sentinels.

They sent Mousqueton to tell Planchet that his master was requested the maud. Athos made him a sign to come with him. Grimaud, according to custom, obeyed in silence. The poor lad had nearly come to the pass of forgetting how to speak.

Unfortunately, the hour was badly chosen for a private conference. Dragoons, Swiss guards, musketeers, light horsemen, succeeded each other in the inn.

"D'Artagnan," said Athos, "tell us what sort of a night you have had, and we will describe ours afterward."

"Ah, yes," said a light horseman with a glass of brandy in his hand, which he swallowed slowly, "ah, yes, I hear you gentlemen of the guards have been in the trenches tonight and that you have taken a bastion."

"The bastion Saint Gervais," replied D'Artagnan, "from behind which the Rochellais annoyed our workmen."

"Was the affair hot?"

"Yes, moderately so. We lost five men and the Rochellais eight or ten."

"But it is probable," said the light horseman, "that they will send pioneers this morning to reinstate the bastion."

"Gentlemen," said Athos, "I have a wager to propose."

"We are all attention, M. Athos," said the dragoon.

"Well, M. de Busigny, I will bet you," said Athos, "that my three companions, MM. Porthos, Aramis and D'Artagnan, and myself will go and breakfast in the bastion Saint Gervais, and we will remain there an hour by the watch whatever the enemy may do to dislodge us."

"I take it," said M. de Busigny. "Now let us fix the stake."

"Why, you are four, gentlemen," said Athos, "and we are four; a dinner for eight—will that do?"

"Capitally," replied M. de Busigny.

"The breakfast for these gentlemen is ready," said the host.

"Well, bring it in," said Athos.

The host obeyed. Athos called Grimaud, pointed to a large basket which lay in a corner and made a sign to him to wrap the viands up in the napkins.

"But where are you going to eat my breakfast?" said the host.

"Of what consequence is that to you if you are paid for it?" said Athos, and he threw 2 pistoles majestically on to the table.

And bowing to all the astonished persons present, the young men took the road to the bastion Saint Gervais, followed by Grimaud, who carried the basket.

"We have some very important matters to communicate to each other, and it was impossible to talk five minutes in that inn without being annoyed. Yonder," said Athos, pointing to the bastion, "they will at least not come and disturb us."

"But for such an expedition we surely ought to have brought our muskets," said Porthos.

"Well," replied Athos, "did not D'Artagnan say that in the attack of last night eight or ten Frenchmen were killed and as many Rochellais?"

"Well?"

"Well, we shall find their muskets, their cartridges and their flasks, and instead of four musketoons and twelve balls we shall have fifteen guns and a hundred charges to fire."

As Athos had foreseen, the bastion was only occupied by a dozen of dead bodies, French and Rochellais.

Four shots were fired, and were flattened against the wa Athos, but not one hit him.

Four shots replied to them instantaneously, but much bett ed than those of the aggressor: soldiers fell dead, and one of neers was wounded. The res troop took to flight.

D'Artagnan uttered an excl of surprise and astonishment.

THE BLESSING OF MOTHERHOOD

Healthy Mothers and Children Make Happy Homes

Motherhood is woman's highest sphere in life. It is the fruition of her dearest hopes and greatest desires; yet thousands of noble women through some derangement have been denied this blessing. In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong. This is evidenced by the following letters which are genuine and truthful:

London, Ont.—"I wish to thank you for the benefit I received by taking your famous medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before my baby was born I was so ill I could not stand long or walk any distance. I had to lie down nearly all the time. After I took your medicine I felt like a new woman. I could work from morning till night and was happy and well. I certainly think it relieves pain at childbirth and recommend it to every woman who is pregnant. You may use this testimonial if you like. It may help some other woman."—Mrs. FRANK CORRIN, 132 Adelaide St., London, Ont.

Brooklyn, N.Y.—"I was ailing all the time and did not know what the matter was. I wanted a baby but my health would not permit it. I was nervous, my side ached and I was all run down. I heard that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was good and took the medicine. I have now a beautiful baby and your Compound has helped me in every way."—Mrs. J. J. STEWART, 299 Humboldt St., Brooklyn, N.Y.

wants ten minutes before the hour will be elapsed. As soon as the enemy are within musket shot we must fire upon them. If they continue to advance we must fire again. We fire as long as we have loaded guns. If such as then remain of the troop persist in coming to the assault we will allow the besiegers to go into the ditch, and then we will push down upon their heads that strip of wall which seems only to keep its perpendicular by a miracle."

"Bravo!" cried Porthos.
"Gentlemen," said Athos, "fire!"
The four muskets made one report, but four men fell.

"I answer for Bazin," said Aramis.
"And I for Planchet," said D'Artagnan.

"This very day we will write the letters," said Aramis; "give them money and set them forward."

"We will give them money?" replied Athos. "Have you any money, then?"

"I will send the diamond which the queen gave me. Quick, quick!" cried D'Artagnan. "I see black points and red points moving yonder! It is an army!"

"Yes," said Athos, "there they are. Think of the sneaks coming without beat of drum or sound of trumpet! Let us decamp."

Grimaud went on before with the basket, and the four friends followed at about ten paces behind him.

Athos marched majestically and his companions regulated their pace by his.

At the end of an instant a furious firing was heard. The Rochellais had at last taken possession of the bastion.

As the friends approached the whole camp was in motion. More than 2,000 persons had assisted, as at a spectacle, at this fortunate but wild undertaking of the four friends, an undertaking of which they were far from suspecting the real motive.

That same evening the cardinal spoke to M. de Treville of the exploit of the morning, which was the talk of the whole camp. M. de Treville, who had received the account of the adventure from the mouths of the heroes of it, related it in all its details to his eminence. The latter, as a reward to D'Artagnan, transferred him to the musketeers.

D'Artagnan was beside himself with joy. We know that the dream of his life had been to become a musketeer. The three friends were likewise greatly delighted.

That evening D'Artagnan went to present his compliments to M. Dessessart and inform him of his promotion. He begged him to have the diamond he put into his hand valued, as he wished to turn it into money. The next day by 2 o'clock M. Dessessart's valet came to D'Artagnan's lodging and gave him a bag containing 7,000 livres. This was the price of the queen's diamond.

In the evening at Athos' lodgings the four friends met. There only remained three things to be decided upon—what they should write to mliady's brother, what they should write to the clever person at Tours and which should be the lackeys to carry the letters. They decided Aramis should write the letters, Planchet to carry one to De Winter, Bazin the other to Tours.

Aramis took the pen, reflected for a few moments, wrote eight or ten lines, then read the following to De Winter:

Milord—The person who writes these few lines had the honor of crossing swords with you in the little inclosure of the Rue d'Enfer. As you have several times since declared yourself the friend of that person, he thinks it his duty to respond to that friendship by sending you important advice. Twice you have nearly been the victim of a near relation whom you believe to be your heir because you are ignorant that before she contracted a marriage in England she was already married in France. But the third time, which is this, you may succumb. Your relation left La Rochelle for England during the night. Watch her arrival, for she has great and terrible projects. If you require to know positively what she is capable of read her past history upon her left shoulder.

to 5,000 livres. We will each take 1,000 livres to be employed as seems good to each, and we will leave a fund of 1,000 livres under the guardianship of M. l'Abbe here for extraordinary occasions or common wants."

It was so agreed. Planchet was sent for and instructions were given him.

"Now," continued D'Artagnan, addressing Planchet, "you have eight days to get an interview with Lord de Winter, you have eight days to return in, in all sixteen days. If on the sixteenth day after your departure at 8 o'clock in the evening you are not here no money, even if it be but five minutes past 8."

In the morning, as Planchet was mounting on horseback, D'Artagnan, who felt at the bottom of his heart a partiality for the duke, took him aside.

"Listen," said he to him: "when you have given the letter to Lord de Winter and he has read it, you will further say to him, 'Watch over his grace, Lord Buckingham, for they wish to assassinate him!'"

"Be satisfied, monsieur," said Planchet, "you shall see whether confidence can be placed in me or not."

And, mounted on an excellent horse which he was to leave at the end of twenty leagues to take the post, Planchet set off at a gallop.

Bazin set out the next day for Tours and was allowed eight days to perform his commission in.

On the morning of the eighth day, Bazin, fresh as ever and smiling according to custom, entered the inn of Parpallot as the four friends were sitting down to breakfast, saying, as had been agreed upon:

"M. Aramis, here is the answer from your cousin."

The letter read:

My Cousin—My sister and I are skillful in interpreting dreams and even entertain great fear of them, but of yours it may be said, I hope, every dream is an illusion. Adieu! Take care of yourself and act so that we may from time to time hear you spoken of.

MARIE MICHON.

Bazin had not, by his fortunate return, removed more than a part of the uneasiness which weighed upon the four friends. The days of expectation are long, and D'Artagnan, in particular, would have wagered that the days were forty-four hours long.

On the sixteenth day D'Artagnan and his friends could not remain quiet long in one place, and in the evening they wandered about like ghosts on the road by which Planchet was expected.

But all at once a shadow appeared in the darkness, the outline of which was

Aramis resumed his pen, reflected a little and wrote the following lines, which he immediately submitted to the approbation of his friends:

My Dear Cousin—His eminence the cardinal, whom God preserve for the happiness of France and the confusion of the enemies of the kingdom, is on the point of putting an end to the heretic rebellion of La Rochelle. It is probable that the succor of the English fleet will never even arrive in sight of the place. I will even venture to say that I am certain M. de Buckingham will be prevented from setting out by some great event. His eminence is the most illustrious politician of times past, of times present and probably of times to come. He would extinguish the sun if the sun incommoded him. Give these happy tidings to your sister, my dear cousin. I have dreamed that that cursed Englishman was dead. I cannot recollect whether it was by steel or by poison. Only of this I am sure—I have dreamed he was dead, and you know my dreams never deceive me. Be assured, then, of seeing me soon return.

"Capital!" cried Athos. There is nothing now to do but to put the address to this letter."

"That's soon done," said Aramis, and wrote:

"To Mlle. Michon, seamstress, Tours."

The three friends looked at one another and laughed. They were caught. "Let us see," said Athos. "Planchet must receive 700 livres for going and 700 livres for coming back and Bazin 800 livres for going and 300 livres for returning. That will reduce the sum

"Gentlemen," said he, addressing the soldiers and pioneers.

Then the shots were repeated without regularity, but always aimed with the same correctness. Nevertheless the Rochellais continued to advance, although upon every three shots at least two men fell.

When arrived at the foot of the bastion there was still more than a dozen of the enemy. A last discharge welcomed them, but did not stop them. They jumped into the ditch and prepared to scale the breach.

"Now, my friends," said Athos, "finish them at a blow. To the wall! To the wall!"

And the four friends, seconded by Grimaud, pushed with the barrels of their muskets an enormous sheet of the wall, which bent over as if acted upon by the wind, and, becoming detached from its base, fell with a horrible crash into the ditch. Then a fearful cry was heard, a cloud of dust mounted toward heaven and all was over.

"Can we have destroyed them all?" said Athos.

"No," cried Porthos; "there go three or four."

In fact, three or four of these unfortunate men, covered with dirt and blood, were flying along the hollow way and at length regained the city. These were all that were left of the little troop.

Athos looked at his watch.

"Gentlemen," said he, "we have been here an hour, and our wager is won. Now for my idea. This milady—this woman—this creature—this demon, has a brother-in-law, Lord de Winter, in London. Well, that's just the man we want. We will have him informed that his sister-in-law is on the point of having some one assassinated, and we beg of him not to lose sight of her. He must place his sister in an institution, and we shall be in peace."

"But I think it would be still better," said Aramis, "to inform the queen and M. de Winter at the same time."

"Yes, but who is to carry the letter to Tours and who to London? We cannot leave the camp without being suspected."

His eminence is the most illustrious politician of times past, of times present and probably of times to come. He would extinguish the sun if the sun incommoded him. Give these happy tidings to your sister, my dear cousin. I have dreamed that that cursed Englishman was dead. I cannot recollect whether it was by steel or by poison. Only of this I am sure—I have dreamed he was dead, and you know my dreams never deceive me. Be assured, then, of seeing me soon return.

Thomas A. Edison announces his New Cylinder Phonograph Record The Blue Amberol

The Blue Amberol is a musical and mechanical triumph. Its volume is greater, and its tone is decidedly finer than any other phonograph record you can buy. And it is practically unbreakable and unwearing. Careless handling will not injure it, and no amount of playing will cause it to reproduce less perfectly than when new.

Ask your Edison dealer to play a Blue Amberol Record for you on an Edison Phonograph today, or write us for particulars.

THE DUKE ON TOUR.

His Royal Highness' Special Train Is a Marvel of Comfort.

A special commissioner of The London Daily Mail accompanied the Duke of Connaught on his western Canadian tour. The following is part of his description of the trip written for old country readers:

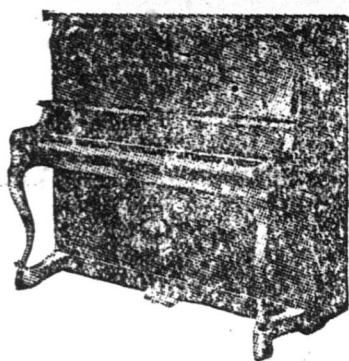

People who have only traveled in Great Britain or the nearer continent can form no idea of what it means to live in a train. They think of our cramped little carriages, which are as very well for journeys of a few hours. These lofty palace cars, with their ample space, their lightness and airiness, their square dining-rooms and smoking-room and libraries, would amaze them. Here am I in my own cabin, writing at my table, which has on either side of it a wide cushioned settee. In the daytime it is a capital little study. I have my books on shelves, plenty of room, no risk of stuffiness, with my domed roof fifteen feet high.

At night the table disappears. From one settee to the other stretches my bed, wide and downy, in which I sleep soundly and restfully the night long, heedless of shuntings, hearing the clang of passing train bells only in happy dreams. A flap comes down and reveals dainty washing arrangements. Close by are baths, both tub and shower. A cheery African valet meets me with kindly care. If I want a change from my own cable, I can turn to the right and find a "parlor," where from a deep armchair turned towards a window I can study the country, to the melodious accompaniment of the best gramophone music. Or I can turn to the left and come to a larger room, with shelves of books, card-tables, newspapers and magazines, cigars, all that a traveler could desire.

From end to end of the train runs a telephone, a mighty convenience. There are two "offices" provided with clerk, typewriters, and all that is necessary for doing business. In the servants' quarters equal care has been taken to install fittings which enable them to look after clothes, which present rather a problem on a tour like this. There are little distinctions between different ceremonies; these must be reflected in the habiliments of the staff.

Our day begins at 7.45, when there is a half of an hour for dressing. The duke always devotes at least a quarter of this time to a brisk stroll. If we are halted at a station he walks into the little town, chats with those he meets, asks questions about the district and the harvest, and always leaves behind the pleasantest impression of cordiality and charm. Another stroll he usually takes about ten o'clock at night before turning in. His Royal Highness never misses an opportunity of stretching his legs or of talking to Canadians of any and every class.

Sometimes these encounters lead to amusing incidents. The other day the duke addressed a couple of young men acting as gangers in a railway construction party. They were leaning against a truck, and did not move or stop chewing gum. They had no idea whom they were talking to. One said he came from Glasgow. "Are you from Scotland too?" the duke enquired of the other. "No, I'm a Canuck" (slang for Canadian), he replied, with a grin. Finally they began to ask the duke questions. "Going far?" "Yes," said His Royal Highness, "as far as the coast." "Ah," said Scotty, "I'd be glad to be gae wi' ye."

Every evening the duke invites certain members of the party to the royal dining-room. The rest mess together farther forward. After dinner there is bridge and plenty of good talk, for the staff, from Col. Lowther downwards, are all men who have seen much and thought much and possess the social gift into the bargain. So it comes to eleven o'clock, and we turn in early so as to be up in good time, refreshed by sweet sleep in pure, keen prairie air, for the experiences and functions of to-morrow.

Now that Hon. F. D. Monk is leaving the Borden Cabinet, interesting stories concerning him and his work are being told. Here is one that indicates a line of worry faced by members with portfolios.

The large sheets of tissue come as wrapping paper are linery and the like is the best for this purpose, on account of its whiteness. When the work is done the paper can be pulled off few stitches which have been attached it can be removed with deft snips of the embroiderer. When crocheting a scalloping, any piece of the thinner material is always best to place a sufficient all around the border and have it stitched down before beginning operation with the crochet needle.

The punch should be used in attaching each scallop, for if it is punched all before the work is started there will be many fall short or long of the mark. Scalloping will certainly appear even if an extra stitch is allowed there, or one less is resorted to come within the allotted. Peter E. Summers relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

Ontario's Wine Production.

The wine press in Ontario this year will be a very large one. This province is rapidly coming to the front as a wine-producing country. With the development of the grape industry a great impetus was given to wine manufacturers, and the five wineries in the Niagara Peninsula alone consume about 2,500 tons of grapes. Many of the grape growers sell their whole crop by contract to the wine manufacturer. This is done in order to ensure a certain percentage of crops before the market opens. The wine manufacturer buys by the ton. The price is regulated by the supply and runs approximately from $17 to $25 per ton. Crops of 3 1-2 tons to the acre are not unusual.

Victoria's Breakwater.

The breakwater to be built at Victoria, B.C., for which the Government has just let a contract to Sir John Jackson, will enclose 300 acres of water of the outer harbor and will be finished inside three years. It will shelter four modern concrete piers with warehouses and all facilities for handling cargoes by the provision of 9,000 feet additional berthing space. The cost is $1,800,000.

A Good Retort.

The Hon. Duncan Marshall, the fat, genial Minister of Agriculture for Alberta, and Mr. Michener, the thin, scholarly leader of the Opposition in the same province, were billed to speak on the same evening in a small town in one of the southern ridings. There were not enough people to make it worth while holding separate meetings, so it was decided to meet jointly.

Mr. Michener spoke first. He delivered a real, old-style Opposition speech, just like those heard in Ontario. Among other things he accused the Government of recklessness in the use of the people's money. It was an eloquent effort, and his friends were delighted.

"The present administration believes in giving every man a chance," said Mr. Marshall, in the heat of a vigorous reply.

"That's how you got your 'beef,' is it?" piped an excited Tory in the back of the room.

"Yes, sir," quickly returned the clever Minister; "and even your trusted leader, Mr. Michener, is secretly hoping the Government will be returned for that very reason."—Canadian Courier.

SAVE THE BEST TURKEYS.

It is a Mistake to Keep Inferior Fowls For Breeding Purposes.

Very often turkey raisers sell off for the early market all their earliest and largest birds, which are usually their all around best. With these, too, they frequently sell off the old, leaving only the later and smaller to furnish the breeding stock for another season. Indeed, I have known everything to be sold but the very latest, birds so late and small that males and females could not be distinguished until the approach of the laying season, when, likely as not, one or more of the supposed hens turned out to be gobblers—gobblers too immature for breeding purposes, but which were either kept or sold for such, says a Wisconsin turkey raiser in Orange Judd Farmer. And such pullets as there were were small, poorly developed, slow to begin laying.

I always save my best for breeders, which of the young is usually the earliest and largest. These I select early, before any are killed or sold. No matter how good the market or how great the price or how few others I have fit, the best I save. It is big, early, well developed birds I want to raise another year, and it is big, well developed birds I must have for breeders.

I know there is a temptation to sell first such as will bring the best prices, especially when there are only a comparatively few suitable to sell and a large number to come on later, but the little gained is much more lost in the end. To be sure, good breeders may perhaps be selected from the later and smaller, but early is best.

MAKING FARM

IT ought to be the aim of every farmer to accomplish these definite results:

Increase profits by enlarging production at a fixed expense.

Diversify crops and all other products so as to distribute labor evenly throughout the year.

Secure a regular income at all seasons by supplying customers with poultry and dairy products, vegetables, beef, pork, etc.

Shorten the workday to ten hours, provide a comfortable home, improve the appearance of the premises and try to make life enjoyable.

Let the young people have a little money from the production of fruit, flowers, vegetables and experimental crops. Teach them to plan work for themselves and to love the country.

There are farmers who have delightful homes and who give the young people all reasonable advantages, but they are an exception to the rule. Country life is made dull and distasteful as a general proposition by long hours, drudgery and a lack of social interests. This explains the large exodus of young people to town when they could be happier and more prosperous in the country.

The difference in yield between the land properly farmed and the land poorly farmed is so great that scientific farming experts are now calling the attention of farmers by communities to the urgency of taking up the study of certain crops and demon-

GIVE THE WIFE A CHANCE.

Farmers have had cause for repentance many times, but no farmer was ever sorry that he put in waterworks so that the windmill would send water to the house. When the housewife can have all the water she needs by a simple turn of the wrist she will appreciate it and reciprocate the kindness.

VETCH GOOD FOR THE SOIL.

When Plowed Under It Adds Big Stores of Humus and Nitrogen.

Vetches are not very extensively grown in the United States, and they are probably as little known as any of the leguminous farm crops. One reason perhaps is that they are more sensitive to climatic conditions than either cowpeas or soy beans. While filling practically the same place in the rotation, cowpeas and soy beans have, therefore, naturally become more widespread in their cultivation. The seed bed for vetch should be well pulverized and be in a firm and moist condition. It is well to seed this crop broadcast on fall plowing after having strating the great loss that is being sustained throughout the country in not making closer study in requirements of cultivation for large grain yields. It is rotation and diversity that are lacking—the former to keep up the farm, the latter the profits.

Every practical rotation must contain crops that use nitrogen and crops that gather it. For example, in the common rotation of corn, wheat and clover the first two use nitrogen, and the third gathers it. In fact, clover is a user and a gatherer of nitrogen. Do not think because a legume adds nitrogen to the soil that it does not use up plant food. All the leguminous crops use more potash and phosphorus than almost any of the grain crops. A large amount of nitrogen is also used, but it is taken from the air.

Now let the farmer push this diversification far beyond the corn, wheat and clover crops. Cowpeas and oats sown together make splendid fodder and benefit the soil. They can be harvested by midsummer and a crop of millet grown on the same land by fall. Rye and clover sown together in the fall can be cut for fodder by June 1 and potatoes, corn, rutabagas, millet or cowpeas grown the same season.

While farmers are making $20 to $30 an acre on heavy grain crops they should not overlook such products as onions, beans, potatoes, sugar beets and fruit, which return a profit of $100 to $200 an acre and place agriculture on a business basis.

A GOOD EXCHANGE.

A manure pile is not pleasing to the eye when it lies in the yard, but it can be changed into corn or hay in a year if it is hauled and spread in the right places. There is about as much danger of "poisoning" fields with manure as there is of poisoning a harvest hand with food.—Iowa Homestead.

A Severe Test.

Alfred Tenison De Lury, M.A., professor of Mathematics at the University of Toronto, sometimes puts extracts of poetry to a mathematical test.

Once he returned on "Mathematical Allusion in Literature," and quoted from Hiawatha: "Swift of foot was Hiawatha, He could shoot an arrow from him, And run forward with such fleetness That the arrow fell behind him—" "Now," went on the lecturer, "on calculation it has been proved that in order to perform this feat, Hiawatha would have to run about eighty-four miles an hour."

especially when there are only a com- paratively few suitable to sell and a large number to come on later, but the little gained is much more lost in the end. To be sure, good breeders may perhaps be selected from the later and smaller, but rarely as good as from the earlier and larger.

As to whether I save old or young depends on individual merit. If there is enough of the young better than the old I save all young; if the old is the best, unless too old, I save that. Usually I save both old and young, the best of each, especially the hens.

Bigger Corn Yield.

Six years' experiment in South Africa showed that corn planted in rows two feet apart gave a greater yield than when planted in wider rows.

Little Farm Hints.

Potash is especially valuable for wheat, cotton, tobacco, Irish potatoes and the grasses. It should be applied in fall for wheat.

Select for fall plowing the stubborn, refractory clay soil and on all fields not fall plowed have clover crops growing to be plowed under in spring.

Prolificness is in every case as important a feature as there can be in seed corn. Hence it is very important that the seed ears selected should not only be of best quality in every particular, but should be one of two or three ears that grow on the stalk.

The best time to plant apple trees is as soon as most of the leaves have fallen, which is generally about November. The roots being then in an active state and the ground still retaining a certain amount of heat, they will form new roots before winter, which is a material advantage.

Sample Markets.

Acting upon the recommendation of the Grain Commission, the Government has decided to establish sample grain markets at Winnipeg and Fort William to be in operation by next September. For some years past the western grain growers have been persistently advocating the establishment of these markets on the ground that great advantage would accrue from them, including higher prices in foreign markets for lower grades of wheat and other grain.

Provision was made for their establishment in the Western Grain Act, passed by Parliament last session. Since then the matter has been under consideration by the Grain Commission. The recommendation for the adoption of the scheme is the result, and it is felt that in operation it will give satisfaction and supply a long felt want.

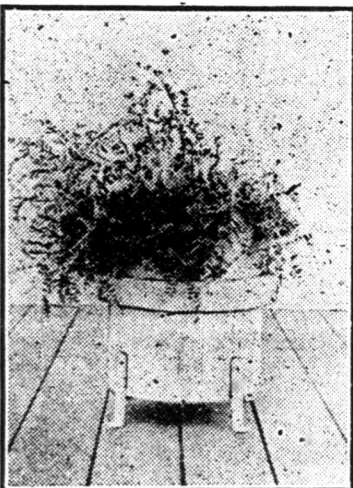

Will Breed Blue Foxes.

Attached to a fast passenger train leaving the Pacific coast recently was an express car carrying live blue foxes from the Aleutian Islands, en route to St. John, N.B., to stock a breeding farm.

By the time the animals arrive at their home their owner will have spent a large sum in transporting them many thousand miles by land and sea, but he is convinced that in their new pasture, which has a climate quite as rigorous as that of the Aleutian Islands, he will get skins of the finest quality.

A blue fox skin of the highest grade, it is said, will bring $800 in the London market.

therefore, naturally become more wide- spread in their cultivation. The seed bed for vetch should be well pulverized and be in a firm and moist condition. visible to sow unusually heavy, so that a thicker growth of vetch will smother down the weeds at the very start.

Ordinarily from four to six pecks or more per acre are sown, and this may be either broadcasted or drilled. The crop can also be seeded with clover, serving as a sort of nurse crop for the young clover plant and frequently gives very good results in this way. Sown with clover it makes an especially desirable sheep pasture, and is also a very excellent soiling crop. As a soil builder it is fully equal to cowpeas. On land adapted to it it produces an extremely heavy growth of vines. These plowed under add enormous stores of humus and nitrogen to the soil.—American Agriculturist.

How Europe Saves Fertility.

The fertility of European soils is maintained by maintaining the supply of active plant food and of organic matter. A part of the nitrogen is secured from the air, a part from the purchased feeding stuffs and some from the nitrogenous fertilizers. The losses of potash and phosphoric acid in the crop are counterbalanced by purchases in feeds and fertilizers. Every care is taken to prevent loss of plant food. Leaves, stalks, etc., are either saved and fed or are used as bedding.

"Now," went on the lecturer, "on calculation it has been proved that in order to perform this feat, Hiawatha would have to run about eighty-four miles an hour."

At another time he was lecturing to a large class of School of Practical Science men. He was annoyed by one student who kept up a constant tapping with his pencil. The professor waited till he found that the noise was intentional, and then he paused and said in his own inimitable way, "I think there is a gentleman tapping his pencil on his desk—or on his head."

Why He Shook Hands.

When Hon. R. L. Borden was receiving a deputation of suffragettes in Toronto recently a couple of newspaper women accompanied the franchise seekers as a matter of business. When the fair ladies had been formally introduced, Mr. Borden noticed a couple of young women who seemed to be very modestly keeping in the background. Stepping over to them he extended his hand. "Oh," said one of them, rather flustered, "we are not suffragettes; we are only newspaper women." "That is why I am shaking hands with you," replied the Premier with a dry smile.

HUGH MCKENNA, Esq.

ST. STEPHEN, N.B. Jan. 17th. 1911.

"I wish to tell you of the great good 'Fruit-a-lives' have done for me. For years, I was a martyr to Chronic Constipation and Stomach Trouble. I was greatly run down and my friends feared I had Consumption. I tried numerous doctors and all kinds of medicines, but received no relief until advised to try 'Fruit-a-lives' by Mr. McCready of St. Stephen, and am pleased to say that I now enjoy excellent health. 'Fruit-a-lives' are the best medicine made, and I strongly advise my friends to use them."

HUGH MCKENNA.

"Fruit-a-lives" is the only medicine that will positively and completely cure Constipation. This wonderful compound of fruit juices acts directly on the liver, causing this organ to extract more bile from the blood, and to give up more bile to move the bowels regularly and naturally.

Unanimous Verdict.

Newspaper publishers and citizens generally throughout the Dominion are unanimous in their opinion that the picture entitled "Mother's Treasures," given with The Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal, this season, is a most delightful and beautiful subject. Here is the opinion of one publisher: "Mother's Treasures" is a marvel of beauty. The subject is one that will have a tendency to strengthen home ties. We, in the same business, wonder how you can afford to give such values in pictures besides the vast amount of good things in The Family Herald and Weekly Star." Signed E. W. Richards, The Mirror, Millbrook. No home in Canada should be without this beautiful picture. One dollar pays a full year's subscription to The Family Herald and Weekly Star, including the picture which is ready for framing, size 23 by 29 inches. It is a big dollar's worth, indeed.
